

Cyber Wars

New Training Event

Cyber Wars

Presented by Nick Grainger | Wednesday 27 August 2014

The electronic age is upon us and we must adjust to keep up. Whatever the device being used, there's a fair chance it can be connected to another device – which means being connected to another person, whoever they may be. Children and young people with trauma histories use the internet and electronic devices today for a range of reasons. This seminar will explore the needs that electronic devices are meeting for our children and young people, consider what the risks to their wellbeing can be, and provide strategies for managing their usage safely.

This seminar will:

- Consider the types of device available for use
- Explore the reasons that children and young people use electronic devices
- Examine the risks of unregulated use
- Assist in the identification of the underlying causes of high internet and electronic device usage
- Provide strategies that will assist in effectively regulating electronic device usage

Suitable Audience:

- Carers & workers from foster, residential, permanent, adoptive & kinship care
- Family service workers • Child protection workers • Case managers
- Mental health professionals • Student welfare / wellbeing professionals
- Teachers / teacher's aide • Therapists • Counsellors • Psychologists
- Social workers • Youth Justice
