As workers and carers we understand the need to debrief following a critical incident. Many children and young people have difficulty communicating with unfamiliar people. Why would they share their inner thoughts with a stranger in order to debrief? You may be the best person to help them understand a difficult event that has taken place. This Skill Bite will introduce participants to methods of supporting the needs of children and young people following a critical event. You will learn how to help them understand their experiences and make sense of what has occurred.

Skill Bite Objectives:

- To explore methods of effectively debriefing children and young people
- To identify the key components of debriefing
- To promote the effective use of debriefing techniques with children and young people
- To understand the contextual use of debriefing strategies
- To identify situations where debriefing strategies are important to use
- To explore what critical events are normally comprised of

Suitable Audience:

- Carers & workers from foster, permanent, residential, adoptive & kinship care
- Family service workers
- Child protection workers
- Case managers
- Youth Justice
- Teachers / teacher's aide
- Student welfare / wellbeing professionals

Nick Grainger has a 10 year background of working with children, young people and families within the out of home care sector. Nick has considerable experience working with vulnerable and high-risk young people in residential and educational settings and is recognised for his calm and compassionate approach. Nick has a particular interest in the educating and skilling of people and has continued to work in the education sector as a facilitator and directly with schools regarding the effects of trauma. Nick also has extensive management experience in the not-for-profit sector, overseeing re-structuring of residential care, adolescent community placement and lead tenant programs.
